History of Curry

Curry was brought to Britain in the 18th century. After centuries of time since then, now "Chicken Tikka Masala" is called as a "True British national dish".

The British introduced curry to Japan at the end of the 19th century.

Two London spice merchants created their own blended spice powders, inspired by Indian Garam Masala, and sold it to the curious restaurateurs of Tokyo.

The attraction of exotic flavour was so great that the locals took to the new dish with vigour.

After going through various different blends in an attempt to suit the local palate, the curry now enjoys huge popularity and some call it "the real" national dish of Japan.

History and profile of

CURRY HOUSE
CoCo ICHIBANYA

In 1974, there was a coffee shop in Aichi, Japan renowned for its marvelous and intriguing curry & rice that never get people tired of, even eating every day. The shop was exactly the starting point of "Curry House CoCo Ichibanya" founded by Tokuji Munetsugu and his wife Naomi.

Tokuji and Naomi first tried to use industrial-use curry sauce for their coffee shop, but they were never satisfied with the taste. Hence, they decided to develop it for themselves, and were devoted to it day and night. After a number of trials, they finally came to a perfect curry sauce by their sheer persistence. Their curry sauce got a great popularity in a blink, and Tokuji & Naomi's first restaurant "Curry House CoCo Ichibanya" was born in 1978.

1974年、日本の愛知県に「毎日食べても飽きない、不思議な美味しいカレーがある」と評判の一軒の喫茶店がありました。このお店こそが、後にカレーhaus CoCo 壱番屋の創業夫婦となる宗次徳二・直美が始めたお店です。
